Reconciliation. Professor Glen Stassen takes an active role in peace-building and on a grassroots level. My hope and desire daily lives in order to avoid the poisonous evil person; but whoever slaps you on your right cheek, turn the other to him also.”

1. Forthcoming of David Leon-Carr, Declaring the Independence of the State of Ibad.

2. Following an external review in 1989, the group is currently in UK mulling his options.

3. However Israel and Palestine believing that violence never has to mean violence we must work to a new situation, the need for negotiation and compromise.

4. The historical narrative of Christmas approaches for all. For those of you who receive my private family update I will be mentioning one or two of the Christmas stories and traditions.

5. For those of you who receive my private family update I will be mentioning one or two of the Christmas stories and traditions.

6. An eye for an eye, and a tooth

7. In Syria and the Middle East continued...

8. Please join us in prayer for our neighboring Muslim family.

9. Reflections on Syria and the Middle East

10. My charity endeavors.

11. Munayer Family Update

12. But for those of you who receive my private family update I will be mentioning one or two of the Christmas stories and traditions.

13. Please join us in prayer for our neighboring Muslim family.

14. For those of you who receive my private family update I will be mentioning one or two of the Christmas stories and traditions.

15. Please join us in prayer for our neighboring Muslim family.

16. For those of you who receive my private family update I will be mentioning one or two of the Christmas stories and traditions.
Reclaiming Identity

At the end of May, our women gathered for an annual weekend conference in Zebabdeh. This time, the theme was “Reclaiming Identity.” We met at Talitha Kumi, a Christian school, with modest accommodations and conference rooms, but the landscape around us was open and welcoming, and we were all grateful to be there. Our focus for the weekend was on how we can engage with our neighbors, especially with those different from us. We wanted to explore the complex layers of identity and the ways in which we can break down the barriers that separate us.

The conference began with a session on “Identity and the Church.” Our speaker, Dr. Munayer, challenged us to consider what it means to be a Christian and how our identity affects our relationship with others. She asked us to think about how we define ourselves and how we can extend this definition to others. She encouraged us to be open to new possibilities and to be willing to share our stories with others.

Our second session focused on “Identity and Culture.” Our speaker, Shoshana, discussed the importance of understanding and respecting the different cultures that make up our communities. She encouraged us to be aware of the ways in which our cultures influence our identities and to be open to learning from others.

The conference continued with a session on “Identity and Conflict.” Our speaker, Nava, challenged us to consider how our identities can be a source of conflict and how we can work to resolve these conflicts. She encouraged us to be open to dialogue and to be willing to listen to others.

The conference concluded with a session on “Identity and Hope.” Our speaker, Rina, challenged us to consider how our identities can be a source of hope and how we can use this hope to inspire others. She encouraged us to be open to new possibilities and to be willing to share our stories with others.

Throughout the conference, our speakers encouraged us to be open to new possibilities and to be willing to share our stories with others. They challenged us to consider how our identities can be a source of conflict and how we can work to resolve these conflicts. They encouraged us to be open to dialogue and to be willing to listen to others. They challenged us to consider how our identities can be a source of hope and how we can use this hope to inspire others. Overall, the conference was a powerful reminder of the importance of identity and how we can engage with others in a meaningful way.